

Our sister company Third Wave Enterprises

Third Wave Enterprises is EMLC's sister company and works to make a real and quantifiable difference to school improvement. Through developing strong partnerships with customers, the company generates lasting and sustainable change to improve life chances for children and young people.

The company has a dynamic and efficient team that is supported by a pool of high calibre, influential associates, many of whom are senior figures in the education sector. Key players include Anne McCormick, George Berwick, George Gyte and Andy Reid, who are supported by the company's own in-house expertise which includes ex-headteachers and local authority strategic officers.

With this combined knowledge the company is always at the cutting edge of the education agenda and continually links its clients into the wider national context.

The work of Third Wave Enterprises is based on communicating, which leads to in-depth understanding of the situation being faced; the next step is challenging those issues and prioritising the order of how to progress, before moving on to creating a fully-bespoke programme of work for each school that is continually reviewed and adapted on the school's path to success.
